Uniform board releases results

By Staff Sgt. Melanie Streeter
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON — Air Force officials recently released the results of the 96th Air Force Uniform Board held June 18 and 19. The chief of staff approved a number of changes, affecting everything from cell phones to scarves. Among the changes are:

- Establish a standardized Air Force physical training uniform.
- Redesign the female lightweight blue jacket.
- Authorize the lightweight blue jacket to be worn indoors.
- Authorize, as an option, to have the Air Force symbol embroidered on the lightweight blue jacket.
- Redesign and revise maternity uniforms.
- Authorize the black scarf only with all Air Force uniforms, eliminating white, gray and olive drab options.

NAF NCO develops youth 'boot camp'

Civic leaders honor volunteer for contributions to local schools

By Capt. Esmeralda Silvestre
12th Air Force Public Affairs

A 12th Air Force NCO was honored during a luncheon hosted by local civic leaders June 26 for volunteering and developing an after-school program.

Staff Sgt. Clarence Augurson, 612th Theater Operations Group duty controller, started his involvement with the schools as an after-school tutor at Naylor Middle School more than six years ago, last month he was recognized as one of the most popular school mentors in the area.

Sergeant Augurson, father of one, Terrell, was recognized by the Pima County Republican Party and Representative Jim Kolbe, for starting an after-school disciplinary program known as "Leadership Boot Camp."

The month-long camp has been running since 1998 and is designed to teach six to eight grade students five basic core values — discipline, respect, teamwork, social awareness and physical conditioning, according to Sergeant Augurson.

Leadership Boot Camp started at Naylor Middle School, now is open to all Tucson middle schools.

"I developed 'boot camp' based on my personal boot camp experience," said Sergeant Augurson. "As instructors, we break people, make them cry in front of their peers and build them back up again."

But the camp is not all tears; they also offer counseling, field trips, pizza parties, and a graduation ceremony. "We even have our 'Oprah moments' when we sit down with the students and talk about ongoing issues," said Sergeant Augurson.

Boot camp was originally open to students with disciplinary problems only, now parents and students raise their hand to be part of this program.

"Although we still have kids 'sent' to us by school officials, many students ask to be enrolled in the program," said Sergeant Augurson.

"We have students who don't speak English, students who are mentally challenged, students from all walks of life — we take them all and treat them like everybody else."

"Helping our children is a great investment — they are our future," expressed Sergeant Augurson. "And getting recognized for it by the mayor and the local civic leaders was an honor."

The program offered up to four times a year, has graduated more than 1,800 students in six years. Leadership Boot Camp is run by Davis-Monthan E-5 and below volunteers. The next camp is scheduled to take place in the fall. For more information call SSgt. Augurson at 228-1769.

Top of the 12th

SrA Christina Dietrich is an Interface Control Technician in the 612th Combat Operations Squadron.

Years of service: 3

Hometown: Colville, Wash.

Primary Duties and Responsibilities: Operates and maintains data link equipment to provide a clear and accurate air picture.

SrA Dietrich

"SrA Dietrich is our most relied upon Airman. She is our subject matter expert on data links and has contributed greatly to the stand-up of our new Air Operations Center," said TSgt. Kevin Powell, NCOIC Defensive Operations in the 612 COS. "In addition to her excellence in work related areas, Airman Dietrich is actively pursuing her CCAF degree, and constantly at the forefront of squadron morale-building volunteer opportunities."

Favorite aspects of D-M: The educational facilities on base that make it easy to take classes.

If you could change one thing to improve D-M, what would it be? Provide more activities for Airmen on base.

What motivates your winning attitude? Knowing that every day I am part of the worlds greatest Air Force defending our Nation and the encouragement I receive from my family and friends.
